Jacques De Decker

Novelist, dramatist, critic, polyglot; 'smuggler' between European languages and cultures, Permanent Secretary of the Académie Royale de Littérature, Jacques De Decker (1945) is one of Belgium's literary circles most outstanding personalities.

Living in an isolated area of Norway, writing in a minority language, Henrik Ibsen nevertheless became one of the world's major playwrights, admired by such authors as James Joyce and Henry James. Jacques De Decker retraces this amazing artistic journey.
