Stefan Liberski

Born and living in Brussels. His second novel, 'G.S. tout simplement', published in 1996 by Albin Michel was hailed by Amélie Nothomb as 'Salubrious, caustic, funny and intelligent.' Liberski is also a film director. He has produced numerous shorts for television and 3 feature length films for the cinema.

'Humanity is on the right track. After thousands of years of restless wanderings, of injustices and conflicts, here it is at last, its goals in sight, reaching the time of paradise on earth. Henceforth, everything will get better and better. Yes! Yes! Good is inevitable! ...'

Stéfan Liberski wrong-foots all the criticism that is hurled at modernity. Written as a monologue, the author offers us the portrait, through daily events and deeds, of a couple of homosexuals with everything that that entails in the way of the refinements and clichés usually attributed them.
